

Direxion Low Priced Stock ETF

Aim High. Buy Low.

Driven by an increase in retail participation, investing in stocks with low share prices has gained popularity. Investors with a higher risk appetite may find low-priced stocks attractive due to the perceived upside potential. That potential may be in the form of a small company with big prospects, or a larger company whose stock price has fallen, but whose future prospects may seem promising.

The Direxion Low Priced Stock ETF (LOPX) seeks to capture 50 stocks trading between $2 and $5 at the time of annual reconstitution. As is often the case with low-priced securities, these names will exhibit higher than average price volatility and be subject to more erratic market movements. This is mostly driven by the idea that these stocks tend to be less known, and owned, by retail and institutional investors alike.

LOPX may be attractive to investors looking for unique approaches to diversifying away from traditional indexes and medium-term traders looking for trending opportunities when low priced stocks that tend to be smaller cap in nature are showing signs of momentum. This offers an opportunity for intermediate-term traders and investors to take advantage of periods of volatility, as these stocks may be mispriced and have the potential for outperformance. Additionally, owning 50 low-priced stocks may reduce concentration risk.

The Index

The Solactive Two Bucks Index (SO2BUCKN) is a representation of securities within a relatively low-price range in terms of absolute trading prices in the United States. The index rebalances quarterly, with constituents assigned an equal weight on rebalancing days. The universe includes all components of the Solactive GBS United States All Cap Index listed on a regulated exchange in the United States.

The following rules determine constituent inclusion:

- A minimum average daily value traded of $1 million over 3 months.
- A market capitalization of at least $85 million.
- A closing price between $2.00 and $5.00 (July selection date), or a closing price between $1.25 and $10.00 (January, April and October selection dates).
- Securities that have had a reverse stock split between the last and current selection day are not eligible for inclusion.

Direxion Shares ETF Risks - Investing involves risk including possible loss of principal. There is no guarantee the investment strategy will be successful. Stocks with a low trading price may be subject to short-term price movements and higher volatility. Further, low price securities may have limited liquidity and trade volume which may affect the Fund's ability to purchase or sell a position at the time of reconstitution, or to purchase or sell the security without effecting the price of the security. Companies with low trading volume and/or low security prices may be seen to have a deteriorating company reputation compared to those companies with greater market capitalization. Additional risks of the Fund include, but are not limited to, Index Correlation/Tracking Risk, Index Strategy Risk, Natural Disaster/ Epidemic and Market Disruption Risk, and risks associated with the market capitalizations and sectors of the securities in which the Fund may invest. Please see the summary and full prospectuses for a more complete description of these and other risks of the Fund.
